AMENDMENTS TO THE REGULATION OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF OBERLIN COLLEGE

On June 7, 1957, the Alumni Board approved several changes in the Regulations of the Alumni Association. This announcement serves as a written notice of proposals to amend the Regulations, in accordance with Article XIV, at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association at the Alumni Luncheon, Saturday, June 7, 1958. Those changes dealing with the Class and Club Presidents' Council were approved by that Council on October 19, 1957. The proposed changes follow:

Article III

MEETINGS OF THE ASSOCIATION

Section I. Annual Meeting. Delete the final three words of the first sentence ("on Commencement Day") so that the sentence reads: "The annual meeting of the Association shall be held at the time of the Alumni Luncheon."

Article V

OFFICERS

Section 5A. The Alumni Secretary. Change "Alumni Secretary" to read "Executive Director" here and wherever it appears in the Regulations.

Article VII

CLASS PRESIDENTS' COUNCIL

Section III. Officers. Substitute for this section the following: "The Class Presidents' Council shall elect a Chairman-elect and a Chairman annually to take office on January 1. The Chairman shall preside at the meetings of the Council; in his absence the immediate past Chairman or the Chairman-elect shall preside. All three officers shall be members of the Executive Committee of the Class and Club Presidents' Council and members of the Alumni Board. The Chairman shall be ineligible for re-election until his term on the Executive Committee has expired."

Article IX

ALUMNI CLUB COUNCIL

Change "Alumni Club Council" to "Club Presidents' Council" here and throughout.

Section III. Officers. Substitute for this section the following: "The Club Presidents' Council shall elect a Chairman-elect and a Chairman annually to take office on January 1. The Chairman shall preside at the meetings of the Council; in his absence the immediate past Chairman or the Chairman-elect shall preside. All three officers shall be members of the Executive Committee of the Class and Club Presidents' Council and members of the Alumni Board. The Chairman shall be ineligible for re-election until his term on the Executive Committee has expired.

Article X (New)

(Articles X-XIV to be renumbered
XI to XV)

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE CLASS AND CLUB PRESIDENTS' COUNCIL

Section I. Each shall make provision for an Executive Committee to consist of the Chairman of the Council, the Chairman-elect, and the immediate past Chairman. Members of the Executive Committee shall serve for three years from the beginning of their terms as Chairman-elect. If the term of office for a Club President or a Class President expires while he is on the Executive Committee, this shall not disqualify him from completing his tenure on the Executive Committee.

Section II. Members of the Executive Committee of the Class and Club Presidents' Council shall be Group B members of the Alumni Board for the duration of their term on the Executive Committee.

The Fork of the Road

TO THE EDITOR:

This alumnus heartily approves the comprehensive, forward-looking program of building and other improvements adopted by the college trustees. Also their continuing study of the policy to be adopted in view of pressures for admission foreseen in the not-distant future. But what is Oberlin's duty toward this body of men and women who will be demanding a college education? She can, by such means as the present plans for better facilities, by the use of the plant twelve months in the year, and other ways, absorb a small increase in the student body, but to say that in the face of a doubled demand from the rising generation she must consider doubling her student population, seems unthinkable. Oberlin is here at the fork of the road . . . it appears to the writer that the decision resolves itself into whether Oberlin is to continue as a leader among liberal arts colleges or, as the only alternative, to be a tag-end trailer in the procession of universities. . . .

There are a great many small colleges that have been gradually shrinking to almost the point of extinction. Why can't they, and other institutions less popular than Oberlin, absorb most of what some think of as Oberlin's "quota" of the increased demand for liberal arts education? To use another figure, isn't Oberlin's belt just about stretched to the limit of what she can digest and still maintain her distinctive position among colleges?

Admissions

TO THE EDITOR:

I was immensely interested in the letter in the February issue on "Admissions Policy" by Jack Herberts. In my own way, through personal observation, I have been coming to the same conclusions as he did, and believe that the alumni should have a voice in formulating and administering this policy. The alumni are realistic about the value of an Oberlin education, and perhaps in many instances are parents of high school children and are better acquainted with the material available for college work.

Simplicity and Beauty

TO THE EDITOR:

With great interest, I have been following the statements with regard to the extensive building plans for Oberlin College. The general statement in the March number by President Stevenson and the diagram of the campus, present and future, will be valuable for future reference. I agree that it is high time for out-moded buildings to be replaced by properly equipped, up-to-date ones. Nevertheless, as we continue returning to our Alma Mater for class reunions, we shall miss, among other buildings, Warner Hall and, especially, Peters when its turn comes to be demolished.

I have read also, with interest, letters from alumni that have been published in the Magazine. With some of the feelings expressed I am sympathetic, but I should like to question one opinion (for that is what it must be) in the letter from Paul B. Arnold, '40 (March), that "few now fail to accept Hall Auditorium," I am one alumnus who has not "accepted" the ugly exterior of the Auditorium (although the interior is beautiful and suitable). And I have heard a number of my fellow alumni express disappointment in the modern style that was chosen for that building (a building for which the College waited for so many years!).

Why could not the alumni be canvassed for their opinions in a general way, as to the style of architecture to be adopted? I would vote, not for extreme modernity, but for simplicity and beauty, such as shown in the Chapel, the Art Museum, the Administration Building and Wilder Hall.

Ever loyal to Oberlin,

A Superb Building

TO THE EDITOR:

I have been reading with growing concern in the various alumni publications and fund-raising appeals of the proposed architectural plans for Oberlin College.

I would like to take this opportunity to register my dissent and protest regarding the plans of which I have read so far: protest as a fond alumnus and dissent as art critic and dealer.

Peters Hall is a superb building no matter how "awful" it looked to the grandchildren of the generation which built it. Here is Victorian architectural fancy at its best — a building which I know the next generation will appreciate even if this one might not yet. It is also a truly indigenous building, a perfect embodiment of spirit of

We Think . . .

WE THINK you should be reminded that this issue of the Alumni Magazine completes the first year in our experiment of sending the Magazine to our alumni without charge. You have received eight issues (did you realize that?) from July 1957 to the present. We have heard from many of you supporting the experiment and adding a complimentary comment or two about the Magazine itself. Need we say that this warms the cockles of our heart?

We want to keep you informed about Oberlin. We think that one of the obligations of alumni status is the maintenance of intellectual curiosity, what the College catalog calls "the habit of continuous scholarly growth." The Magazine, we feel, complements our small but vigorous efforts to offer educational opportunities to returning alumni at Homecoming and, as you can see by glancing at the back cover, at Commencement time.

We feel strongly that alumni have a responsibility to express themselves on College policy, and our "Letters" columns have reflected your acceptance of this responsibility. Alumni opinion can be influential; it assists those charged with responsibility to make the right decisions.

We hope to stimulate alumni interest in Oberlin because we need alumni financial support. As this and previous issues have reminded you, the Alumni Fund is an important phase of alumni activity. It is even more important to the College, which needs both the funds alumni contribute and the evidence that a large percentage of alumni think well enough about Oberlin to contribute. We urge you to re-read Wellsprings of Leadership, which we sent you in March. It tells the story.

If the Magazine has served to rekindle your interest in Oberlin and what Oberlin stands for, we think that our experiment can be called a success. What do you think?

OUR COVER shows the elm-shaded walk across Tappan Square, leading from the Sophronia Brooks Hall Auditorium on the East to the Memorial Arch on the West. Down this walk will march the Commencement procession on June 9 for the exercises that will be held out-of-doors (weather permitting) on the plaza of the Auditorium. The photograph was taken some thirty years ago, but alumni returning to the campus for the 125th Commencement celebration will notice little or no change in this view from what the cover photograph shows.

TRUSTEE JOHN W. LOVE, '14, Business Editor of the Cleveland Press, was one of the American business writers invited on a six-week "junket" to India by the Indian government last winter. A MEMBER of the 30th year reuniting class, Ruth Tracy Millard, homemaker and free lance writer, sends an unsolicited letter which we think every Oberlin alumnus should read. Please see page 10.

ONE OF THE YOUNGER alumni asks some questions and suggests some answers about supporting the Alumni Fund. Please turn to page 9 and see what Ben Belknap, '52, has to say.

FOR THIRTY YEARS no undergraduate has called Professor Daniel Chapin Kinsey, A.M., '35, anything but "Dan," which is reason enough why this genial mentor of track and cross country and director of intramurals needs no introduction to any alumnus who left Oberlin since 1928. Even so, William I. Judson uncovers some new facts in his profile series of the Yeoman coaching staff. Please see page 12.

ATTENTION!

The next issue of the Alumni Magazine will be the October issue, which should be in your hands by the last week in September.

The Bhakra Dam, under construction on the Sutlej River, in the foothills of the Himalayas, will be slightly higher than America's Hoover Dam. It is designed to provide water for some 10,000 square miles of irrigation and to generate 700,000 kilowatts. The project, employing 7,000 Indian workers, will be completed in 1960 at an estimated cost of 350 million dollars.

Preposterous Journey

The new, and mixed, economy of India is revealed to an American business writer on a 6,000 mile junket to India

By JOHN W. LOVE, '14

IN THE TECHNICAL VOCABULARY of journalism, a tour paid for by somebody outside the newspaper is known as a junket. Of all the junkets I had ever heard of, let alone participated in, none equaled a six-week trip the Indian government provided for several American business writers last November and December.

The Indians wanted to show us the results of the First Five-year Plan and progress in the Second. As always in such undertakings, no effort was made to restrict what we might write. Two competent representatives of the Indian government accompanied us as guides and sources of information, economic and historical. Six weeks, though, are too long for India. They bewilder a man, prevent his writing a book.

We traveled 6,000 miles within the country by planes of the Indian Airlines and the air force, by private car on the railroads, and by automobile. Lest anybody suspect that American taxpayers put up a large part of the expense, let me add that except for the fares to Air India's connection at Zurich, the money came from internal funds.

Very serious people the Indians. They laid out a tour of old industrial districts and a couple of the new; of the burgeoning steel industry, power plants, irrigation works, automobile, electrical, machinery, plane, steam locomotive and other factories; of conferences with officers of the central and several state governments. Upon seeing the schedule in Bombay, we had to explain that though we still possessed the vigor of youth, we had to preserve the fine touch of the writing man. So the schedule was cut by a third.

A Strenuous Progress

After leaving New Delhi we found the tour developing into a progress. Delegations of chambers of commerce welcomed us at rail stations and airports, hung garlands of jasmine about our necks, took us to lunches, teas, and dinners, made speeches at us, expected speeches in return.

To the dismay of some members of the party tea was exactly that, nothing stronger than Darjeeling.

Then we met the local press. I have shuddered at the reporting of such interviews with visiting journalists in Chile and Italy, even western Canada. (How in the world did they suppose we had said that?) But the Indian newspapermen were gentle in their questions, save only on why America helps Pakistan, and their reports were accurate.

Presently the schedule was built up again into one as strenuous as the original — this time loaded with hospitality. It became a "good-will" tour in reverse. We remonstrated that we were working men, expected to produce articles for our employers. Once again the effort was made to slim down the programs but it was too late. The local boys had their parties organized.

It takes a strong constitution to spend mornings walking through miles of machine shops and afternoons calling on ministers, with four-course meals (including buffalo steaks), toasts in fruit juice, and speeches "laid on" as the Indians say in British vernacular. All this to be followed about 10 p. m. by writing ageless prose in a style mingling Kipling and Kiplinger. I have said long ago there could be no pursuit more glorious than that of column writer if it were not for just one thing: the poor fellow has to do a daily piece for the paper.

Now and again we had a day off. These free days fell at times when we could visit the Elephanta, the Ajanta, and the Ellora caves, those sacred halls carved out of the solid rock. Americans sing of templed hills; the Indians have them. We came to consider ourselves as specialists on subterranean design, sculpture, and fresco.

We even investigated works of the Pallava kings below Madras. There, hills had been cut down into temples. We were informed, though, that Indians also built temples as westerners did, by laying up blocks.

We were shown the crowning glory of India, at Agra. There we were allowed to run our fingers over the inlaid 99 attributes of God and buy rosebuds that lay on the sarcophagus of the beautiful Mumtaz Mahal. Not far away we wandered through the incredible abandoned palace of Akbar.

The Steel Industry

Our heaviest assignment was the steel industry. The new mills will soon compose India's most remarkable creation. An existing capacity of about 1,500,000 ingot tons is being expanded to six million. The famous old Tata works at Jamshedpur, built and operated by a Bombay Parsee family, is being doubled, partly on United States bank loans.

Three wholly new mills are being built by the Indian government. British, German, and Russian contractors are erecting them, they to be paid over a period of years.

This industry provides the best single example of India's new mixed economy. Even Sir Jehangir Ghandy, managing director at Jamshedpur, assured us that the combination of socialism and private ownership was both necessary and practical — in India. In no other way could the nation, in the time required, build the industrial capacity it needed so badly.

One of the strangest of sights anywhere in the world, I am sure, was that of 10-ton Cleveland-built earth movers roaring past a pick-and-shovel crew digging the hole for a furnace, with 50 women carrying out the clay and shale in baskets on their heads. (I recommend the practice to American women; it would improve their carriage. Nothing could be lovelier than the saris one sees in the dining room of the Taj hotel in Bombay, but many an "untouchable" out in the country could wear them with more grace.)

An engineer on one of the steel projects explained that common labor at two rupees a day (42 cents) could compete with the largest shovels and trucks on excavations no deeper than 15 feet. There, and at the Bhakra dam, far to the north, we discussed the conflict of the old ways with the new. Both are used in construction. At Bhakra the work was held back a year or more because of Punjabi prejudice against machinery. Then it was discovered that Bhakra would take 52 years to complete with hand labor. Today the biggest American cranes and other equipment are being used to rear a concrete structure a little higher than the Hoover.

In the combination of engineering and economic subjects in which a business writer occupies his time, the language of the Indian was the same as that of the American. In this domain the East was West and the West was East, and always the twain were meeting. The inquirer in Indian industry felt he was no farther from home than he would be in Ontario.

The dam and hydrel plant at Bhakra will generate 700,000 kilowatts and provide water for 10,000 square miles of irrigation. (Power generation and irrigation are to a degree in conflict with one another.) The job employs 7,000 Indians, an Indian engineering staff, and 25 Californians. The project is to be completed in 1960.

The name Punjab means five rivers. One of them, the Sutlej, flows through a water gap in the foothills of the Himalayas near Simla. It is a perfect site for power development, as was perceived as early as 1884. From here one can see, far to the eastward, the snowy peaks of the main range. Beyond, lies the inaccessible Tibet.

Karela State, Communist Province

A very different country was that of Karela State, the old Travancore-Cochin, 1500 miles south along the Malabar coast. We motored up into the Cardamom Hills of the Western Ghats, there to see pepper vines and cashew trees, the cardamom trees for which the hills were named, and the wild elephants around Periyar Lake.

We called on English tea, coffee, and rubber planters and Indian chemical manufacturers to ask how they were getting along with the Communists. Not very well, they said — too much threat of disorder. The boys out in the sticks had been taking Communism too seriously.

Down in the capital at Trivandrum we found officials of the new Communist government deploring the violence. They realize they are being watched the world over, rather nervously from New Delhi, and with a thin majority they are distinctly on trial. I, for one, could identify no steps being taken toward true Communism. Very moving was the assurance from both the state government and the opposition that if any Americans would open branch plants there, they could be certain of protection and loyal workers. They badly need industry.

Indians first and always, the prime minister and cabinet took us to see the ancient Kathakali dance in Kanakakunnu palace, former home of the maharaja. We were given synopses, but they were little help in the shouting and stomping in the Malayalam tongue. The prince had a salute of 17 guns in the old days. Now, on pension, he is still held in affectionate regard.

Of the manufacturing industries, one of the newest in India was steam locomotives. In plants in the Damodar valley and at Jamshedpur, one publicly owned, the other private, we were shown locomotives that were coming off the line three or four a week. They were formerly bought in Britain; their manufacture in India is saving foreign exchange. They exactly duplicate the western product, for Indian railways still run on British practice. Their engines are still driven by Anglo-Indians.

Backward in Time

Those visits carried us backward in time, for America was no longer building steamers; indeed, were we building any locomotives at the moment? We had to admit they were busier than we were in that respect. As for Diesels, they expected to be making them before long. They had high hopes of discovering more oil. If they could only strike oil in Arabian quantities they would be freed of all worries, and America of the prospect of having to lend money to India for some while to come. A former chairman of the Indian railway board told us he thought the gravels under the plain of the Ganges were full of oil. Where else could it have gone if not down to the granite 7000 feet below? We admitted it seemed logical.

Another journey backwards in time was through the plant of Hindustan Motors, at Calcutta. There the manufacture of Morris and Studebaker cars was carried on in ways we remembered from 30 years ago in the States, before the economies of continuous assembly squeezed out the small plants. Nearly all of the car is now made in India. Only instruments, roller bearings, and a few items of that type must come from America and Britain.

The mechanical marvel of our tour was the government-owned machine tool works in Bangalore. "Most modern in the world" was the officers' boast, no doubt an accurate one. Oerlikon of Switzerland had equipped it to make lathes and radial drills. The manager said he could lay down tools in New York against Connecticut competition. Little doubt he could, with Bangalore wages from $3 to $15 a week, even though American labor is more than twice as efficient. But he wouldn't, he added — his backlog of unfilled orders was nine months, with years of work beyond.

Why, we asked, did they manufacture tools as modern as those of the Swiss and the Americans? Would not simpler machinery be better adapted to Indian use? The answer was a somewhat complicated one, but similar in its reasoning to that for installing the automatic transfer machine (or "automation") in the Renault plant in Paris, in the early days of the Marshall Plan. Anything short of it was obsolete in western practice, and there was no knowing when Indian industry would catch up. Moreover, Indian labor could as well be trained in the most advanced practices as in the older, perhaps as readily. First to build for a number of workers greater than a modern plant required, then to train and house them — build whole towns for them — would cost every customer more than he could afford. The Russians must have answered the question in the same way.

Need for Funds

India's First Five Year Plan cost the central and state governments the equivalent of around 4.5 billion dollars. The Second Plan was budgeted for an outlay of about twice that amount. Even if everything had gone well the program was probably too heavy within the time allowed for its completion. No country has undertaken so great a burden of capital expansion on decisions democratically made; none has relied solely upon voluntary methods to carry it out. Only oil-rich Venezuela and authoritarian Russia assumed comparable tasks, Venezuela by heavy imports, Russia by unexampled austerities and cruelties in forced savings.

It was clear the Indians had only two sources of the foreign exchange they would need for importing equipment: their receipts from exports and borrowings from other countries. Since the launching of the Second Plan two years ago, the expenses have risen, and their ability to meet these expenses from exports has gone down. Prices of equipment to be purchased in the United States and Europe increased, especially in the U. S. Ocean freights shot up on the closing of the Suez, and receipts from exports slipped off. Soon afterward came the poor monsoon in the states around Calcutta, crop failures and the threat of hunger.

When members of our party received the invitations in August it was possible to see that India would be needing more money. The clue to one purpose of the hoped-for publicity was not elusive. By the time we arrived in November, India's prospects were clouding over. Minister of Finance, T. T. Krishnamachari, had returned from European capitals and Washington with little or no firm assurance of additional help. By the time we had swung around on our return to New Delhi an ominous timetable had taken shape. Bombay businessmen were more informative than the government in New Delhi had been.

It was then apparent that by March the government would have to modify the Second Plan substantially, with some resulting unemployment, and that by late July the country would be running seriously short of foreign exchange. Imports have been drastically cut back, but the crisis in the summer still hangs over. B. K. Nehru (cousin of the Prime Minister) headed the delegation which recently closed an agreement in Washington with the Export-Import Bank for a loan of 225 millions for additional capital equipment, apparently the items needed to complete projects likely to produce earnings the soonest.

The Indian government has contracts with a German firm and Machinexport of Moscow, which will complete two of the new steel mills, albeit the Indians can't pay for them within the stipulated times. It may be able to borrow enough from the International Monetary Fund to avoid defaulting on external obligations this summer. If, however, the country escapes embarrassment it will be a near thing, as they say in Indian English.

The Five Year Plan will have to be extended over six or seven years. The Indians will be disappointed, but it should not imperil their government. There is no danger of a swing toward Soviet Russia. The Russians have flattered our foreign aid program by imitating it in a small way, but they cannot pick up the load we have been carrying there. The Indians are likely to approach our government again, with new appeals, but even Indian critics of the Five-Year Plans assured members of our party that theirs was a good business risk.

John Love, '14

Akbar's deserted palace at Fatehpur Sikri, Agra District, which has been abandoned for more than 300 years

Since there will always be an India, one could hazard the guess that the loans we have made to the Indians will be paid off eventually, except for the fact that international loans of such size are not paid off in the ordinary manner. Our tariff policy is one that does not permit us to receive large remittances in the form of an excess of imports. There remains, though, the prospect that international inflation will some day so reduce the real value of such sums that they can be paid without anybody noticing it.

Our voyage to India and back composed one of those tantalizing experiences members of the newspaper group have become used to. A part of the life. We did have an hour in Egypt — at midnight in the Cairo airport. For the rest, nothing at that season but sea, cloud, desert and sea, not two days flying time between Idlewild and Bombay.

one of the generations which made Oberlin. It would be as wrong to tear down Peters as it would be to tear down First Church.

Oberlin is poor in architecture. Except for Peters, the only building of architectural merit is the Hall Auditorium, a really beautiful building which has also received a deserved amount of national publicity.

However, all the proposed plans which I have seen seem to call for rather ghastly, cheap-looking pseudo Georgian pastiches which are as unappealing as they are uneconomic to build.

If building must be done I can see no reason not to build in an advanced, contemporary style such as that of the Hall Auditorium. Incidentally, it is a wonderful fact that truly modern architecture is also considerably less expensive than imitations of the past: see Time magazine cover story on Edward Stone, March 31, 1958, and the date on the dormitory buildings for the University of South Carolina.

Is Oberlin Different?

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to tell you how much I appreciate your kindness in sending me the Alumni Magazine. I have enjoyed all the numbers, but especially the last one, the February number. How clever is the cover! A living history log on one side, and beauty and endurance on the other side.

Is Oberlin Different? This is what you ask. Of course I have not been to many colleges, but without hesitation I say "Yes." I fell in love with Oberlin years, years ago, because of its products and reputation. It was my good fortune to be actually in Oberlin in 1920-21. I went, I saw, and I loved it. Both the student body and the town itself had especial kindness and consideration for the foreigner. No snobbishness, but friendliness was their attitude.

My memory is full of beautiful facts from Oberlin. President King, that kind, great man of God, helped me to see the spiritual facts in their right place. Dean Bosworth, that man of courage, prayer, and faith, made me humble. Professor Fullerton, delightful, full of humor, Old Testament teacher, gave zest to my life. Professor Sherman, that inspiring teacher of literature, made me love literature the more.

Above all, there was always a spiritual atmosphere and help. That year a very great sorrow had come to me. But both the girls and the church ladies tried to share my sorrow. In a word, I had a beautiful year there.

Real Stature

TO THE EDITOR:

"The New World Economy and Our Stake in It" and "Other Worlds, Other People" [January, 1958 Alumni Magazine] gave real stature to our magazine and our Alma Mater.

Such articles stimulate my philanthropic impulses and my sense of responsibility.

On Building

TO THE EDITOR:

It is heartening to read so many letters . . . in the Oberlin Alumni Magazine remonstrating and protesting against the demolishing of our treasured buildings on the campus. What would Oberlin be without beautiful Warner Hall?

A campaign should be started immediately to halt any such destruction. . . . Our ivy halls must be saved.

over the building program. We are "past numbers," and "the show must go on. . . ." With all good wishes.

Memories

TO THE EDITOR:

The February number of the Alumni Magazine came today, and I must tell you what a pleasure it was to read about the Old Oberlin days, and the lovely picture of Miss Oaks, and Professor C. E. Ward's tribute. My study was mostly in the Conservatory, but I knew Madam Johnston and Miss Oakes, and would steal away to hear an Art Lecture or a talk with them, never thinking of any credit. It led me later to study with several very fine artists. . . . Recently, I saw the Picasso exhibit in Chicago at the Art Institute. Great mentality, but was I ever glad to go across the Avenue and hear Rudolph Serkin in a wonderful recital of Bach, Schubert, and Beethoven!

Also, I was glad to see President Fairchild's dignified portrait. The year he died, Professor Kimball had the choir members on the solo row in Second Church sing at the funeral services. Also for Professor Rice, Dr. Barrows, and General Shurtleff. I was one of the number. For a long time after, when the old chapel bell rang, it seemed like a funeral dirge. But now, what a wonderful memory.

I have wanted to bring to Oberlin a sketch I made in Glacier Park of Mt. Oberlin. Perhaps some day I may come again.

In Appreciation of the Oberlin Years

A few thoughts on giving . . .

By BEN BELKNAP, '52
*Medical Student,
University of Rochester*

"If we find the benefits . . . to be enduring should we not expect the obligation to be lasting as well?"

THOSE WHO WISH to clarify the extent of their obligation to Oberlin may find some satisfaction in readily available statistics, such as those which indicate how little (less than 50 per cent) of the cost of our college education was borne by us. That the education so acquired continues to be held in high regard is attested to by the results, also readily available, of various surveys and polls. There are, however, additional grounds for contributing to Oberlin. Some of them form part of the basis of my own contributions, and I know them to be also the source of the gifts of many.

The widening of intellectual horizons, the development of a sense of social responsibility, the growth of a respect for spiritual values — these have been cited as objectives of the Oberlin community. Few of us can claim to have culled from our Oberlin years all that we might have; yet I would suggest that perhaps the greatest part of our obligation remains rooted in the impact of objectives, such as these, upon us.

What has been the value, in these terms, of the Oberlin experience? This assessment cannot be made for us. It seems important, however, that we seriously attempt to make it ourselves.

Some months ago, as I was casting about for some means of measuring this kind of worth, it was suggested to me that it would be useful to recall the relatively little thought which most of us gave to the choice of a college. The suggestion implies that we further consider what opportunities we might thus quite easily have missed, as well as the varied ways in which our lives might as easily have differed. This is but one avenue which might be taken in our attempts to judge the worth of Oberlin's impact upon us; in following it, perhaps the extent of our gratitude can provide an index of what we owe.

That several recent Oberlin classes, in last year's Alumni Fund campaign, managed to contribute more than some of their elders cannot be attributed to greater financial resources of a younger generation. I like to believe that this pattern of giving, among some of the younger classes, represents in large part a widespread and quite serious evaluation of the Oberlin years. I do believe that it establishes quite clearly that the evaluation, especially when made by many, is far more important than what at first glance appears to be "the ability to pay."

Year in and year out, we can expect to receive requests for support of Oberlin. If we find the benefits of Oberlin's impact upon us to be enduring, should we not expect the obligation to be lasting as well? Perhaps we should take this time, each year, to recall what those benefits have been. In so recalling, I think that many of us will find ourselves with promises to keep.

WHY is Oberlin Different?

By RUTH TRACY MILLARD, '28

"IS OBERLIN DIFFERENT" (February issue) was a telling question and one which you answered with perhaps more forbearance than the rest of us deserve. It is a humiliating admission to those of us who firmly believe in Oberlin's academic preeminence; but the cold, tabulated facts don't lie, and in Alumni support, we lag far, far behind.

Comparisons are invidious, but they are also inevitable. And I defy anyone who happens to have been 25 years married to a Dartmouth man (as I have!) for instance, to avoid them this long. I am perfectly certain that Oberlin has some Alumni who need not yield in loyalty to those of any college in the country — but of the general body of our 15,000 living graduates, the annual giving record is pretty sad.

I see that my own Class of 1928 led in amount given to the 1957 Alumni Fund, with $2,709. Fine — Until I mention that to my husband, and learn that his Dartmouth 1926 Class (only one-eighth larger) gave more than ten times as much, or around $30,000 — and, yes, they do that EVERY year. Furthermore, while Oberlin's 1957 total of $60,000 was the largest in its history, Dartmouth Alumni (19,000 living grads) gave $928,592, or close to a million dollars in the same year. (In 1956 they gave $864,230.)

Unbelieving, I murmur something about "percentage of participation" — and there I wince at the real crusher: The per cent of graduates contributing to Oberlin in 1957 is 26.1 — Dartmouth is above 70. Even if you didn't ask us, Les — here's one alumna asking WHY?

ON the matter of AMOUNT, I have a few answers, and I don't think they're just alibis. On percentage — although I'm frankly stunned — I have more than just a glimmer, too. We just don't work at it as they do.

But first, as to the AMOUNT given. Perhaps Oberlin shouldn't be compared to Dartmouth, Harvard and Princeton. If these three lead with similar figures in Alumni giving, doubtless they would also show a big lead income-wise, although I have figures from only one of them. Dartmouth's 1926 Class (aforementioned) according to an income survey published in FORTUNE for June of last year, showed income ranging from $3,000 to $250,000 yearly, with a median of $14,000. At a pure guess, one certainly doubts that Oberlin classes would approach that.

But not because the women must be discounted! How can they be, when Wellesley is right in at the top, with 16,140 graduates giving $926,319! Vassar's 13,000 gave $666,057, and Mt. Holyoke's 10,684 gave $131,667. (1956 Report of the American Alumni Council — 1957 figures not yet available, as this is written.) No indeed — isn't it well established by now that women control 85% of the national "buying power?"

THE CLUE to great income differences can be found in our new 1958 booklet, Wellsprings of Leadership, which states that (page 3) "Of the graduates in the Class of 1957, those now teaching or taking further work in preparation to teach number 226, or 69 per cent of the class."

This, then, is the great contribution which makes the other impossible. No, you cannot have it both ways. The best-known document in college circles the past year has been the Report of the President's Committee (President Eisenhower, that is!) on Education Above the High School, which specifically points out that college faculties are in effect subsidizing the colleges through their own low salary scale — and that this giving totals more in real money every year than all the Alumni gifts of all our colleges and universities put together.

This is an insufficiently publicized fact. I know a teacher of second grade reading who gets over $6,000 a year — but it took a national quiz program to reveal that Charles Van Doren at Columbia was paid $4,500.

I don't know the over-all percentage of Oberlin graduates engaged in teaching. In my own 1928 Class (surveyed ten years later) it was exactly 50% (or 180) with another 20 women who had married educators. If the general average runs as high as in the 1928 and 1957 classes, then there should be some way to take credit where credit is due!

That's not to say we should rest on such hypothetical laurels — far from it! Not without one more financial comparison, and that is with the other coed colleges in our own league — that is to say, with the top ten on that same Chicago survey — a group one may assume to turn out a high proportion of teachers, too. And now, we must prepare for another shock. Swarthmore, which all but tied Oberlin academically, has us licked to a standstill in Alumni gifts. Their mere 6,245 graduates gave $160,819 in 1956, with a 45.2% participation, and an average gift of $40.10. Carleton and Grinnell, with less than half our number of graduates, gave as much money as we did, and Wooster with 7,218 gave $86,810.

SO THERE you have it. We're just not doing enough. Let me freely admit to many small gifts — but in 29 years I think I missed only once. And that's why it's hard to understand that low per cent of participation. With amounts of giving disregarded, there's absolutely no excuse for Oberlin's 26.1% (of actual graduates — only 15.7 of the general list) when you see on the Alumni Council's Honor Rolls that Wellesley alumni participating are 60%, Mt. Holyoke 66.4%, Amherst 71%, Princeton 74%, and Dartmouth topping them all with 79.7%! A personal footnote to that last, which is a general Alumni average: Many Dartmouth classes are regularly 100% contributing, and one of them reports 101% — listing one "honorary alumnus" who kicks in with all the rest.

"How does Dartmouth do it?" is a question that has been asked in Alumni offices for a long time — but any Dartmouth wife can shed some light on that, without any trouble at all. As I said in the beginning, they just everlastingly work at it. No, I don't mean solely at solicitation — but at Alumni relations generally — and who's to say the two are not inextricably related? What they do can be summarized under Communications, Organization, and Service to the College — and I mean, not just at certain times, but all year round.

UNDER COMMUNICATION — it's a longstanding joke in our family that if there's nothing else in our mailbox, there will always be a Dartmouth piece of mail, sometimes two — occasionally three on the same day! My husband gets his 88-page Alumni Magazine, with forty pages of Class News (our 32-page issue for February had seven), and timely articles and columns by outstanding faculty. He also hears from the Long Island Alumni, the New York Dartmouth Club, his fraternity, the Outing Club, and the Admissions Office. He gets a regular 1926 Class Newsletter, and a reminder from his Class Agent if he doesn't respond promptly at Alumni Fund time. From his Class Secretary he gets reminders for personal news, and a greeting on each and every Birthday! (That last may sound corny, but do you know, it works. I think it gives that "family" feeling.)

Oberlin has improved in respect to communications, with the quarterly Oberlin Today and Oberlin Letter and, most recently, the sending of the Magazine to all Alumni. In the fall of 1946, I went back to Oberlin to represent both the New York Clubs with a strong recommendation that this be done. I am not sure it should be sent to more than the actual graduates — but if this is continued, it surely will pay off with interest.

Under Organization, it's worthy of note that the Dartmouth Classes have no officers except the working ones: the Secretary who rounds up all those personal news items all year, a Treasurer or Class Agent, and a Bequest Chairman. Perhaps our classes should give up electing Presidents and Vice Presidents who do little or nothing between Reunions, and try this system!

UNDER SERVICE to the College, I will mention just one thing. Every single one of the six or seven thousand applicants for Dartmouth every year is personally interviewed by an Alumni Committee. Whether this is of great help to the college in sorting out the six hundred that can be admitted, I don't really know — but for Alumni spirit, it's tremendous! Every year I groan at giving up whole afternoons and evenings (usually right around Christmas, the busiest part of the year) to these interviews in our home; my husband has been Area chairman for several years. But as we've shared the thrill for those who "made it," and become acquainted with some of their families, I have to admit it's been worth it. And for just "keeping in touch" with the college, it can't be beat. Has Oberlin ever considered such a plan, I wonder?

In February I attended the Hopkins Dinner with my husband, when 2,100 Dartmouth Alumni from 32 states sat down in the Waldorf's Grand Ballroom, with 800 more turned away for lack of room. The occasion was equivalent to what we might do if President King were alive, to have the new King Building presented to him on his 80th birthday. Nelson Rockefeller was Chairman and Sherman Adams (also an alumnus) brought personal messages from President Eisenhower. But the general alumni feeling was what made one wonder — would even Oberlin have done as well?

What IS loyalty? Not in money gifts entirely, that's certain. Man does not live by bread alone — but neither has he learned to live without it. Loyalty to Oberlin must be backed up with something. Has Dartmouth got anything Oberlin hasn't? I don't believe it. I think we could show a 75% participation if we really went after it as they do. So let's start with this 1958 Alumni Fund. If we do that, the $100,000 will take care of itself.

A LOOK AT . . .

Dan Kinsey, Track Coach

Collector of rocks and records scaler of hills and hurdles master of quadrilles and the quirk whose home is a continual open house to former Oberlin students

By WILLIAM I. JUDSON

Helping to brand a wild horse on a Western ranch is just another experience for Dan Kinsey (left) in a life filled with activity.

DAN KINSEY, successful tutor of Oberlin's track athletes for the past thirty years, came to Oberlin in the fall of 1928 after an illustrious athletic career at the University of Illinois, where he graduated in 1926. While a sophomore at Illinois he was chosen member of the Olympic track team, and he became a gold medal winner in the 110-meter hurdles at the 1924 Games held in Paris.

Spectacular as a youth in College, he has been a spectacular figure ever since. He has climbed mountains, survived a train wreck, fought a forest fire in the Grand Tetons, made geology trips into the four corners of the country, had camping experiences in most of the states of the Union, led a Friends summer work project in the Missouri Ozarks, coached cross country teams which have recorded 130 wins as against only 56 losses and track squads which have been equally successful: 124 wins and only 47 losses. His harriers have won 18 Ohio Conference championships, and his track teams another 13 titles.

He is perhaps known, respected, and loved by more students and former students as coach, teacher, counselor, and friend than any other member of the College faculty.

A terrific, tireless worker in the areas in which he is interested, most of those near him wonder when he finds time to sleep and eat. In addition to carrying a full teaching and coaching load, he has been director of intramurals since the retirement of Guy Throner in 1954.

And beyond the call of duty come all the time-consuming extracurricular activities and interests: Shansi, YM-CA, Boy Scouts; recreational leadership on all parts of the campus, ranging from Frisby flinging to folk dancing; activity in the work of the Friends, both on and off campus; calling for square dances (in frequent demand); membership on the village recreation commission; membership in all the expected professional organizations.

Dan and Dorothy Kinsey have three children. David, the oldest, graduated from Oberlin in 1954, received his A.M. degree from Yale last year, and is now teaching history at North Haven, Connecticut, High School. Douglass, who graduated in 1957, is studying for his M.F.A. at the University of Minnesota. Dea Jean, the youngest, is a freshman in Oberlin.

Spring Sports

BAD WEATHER has cut so heavily into spring practice that Coach Dan Kinsey comments, "I hardly know who I have on the track squad." Prospects, however, are not gloomy. Bob Service, captain and miler, ran well in the Knights of Columbus Indoor Meet in March; and Walt Johnson, who tied the Oberlin record of 9.8 seconds in the 100-yard dash last spring, confounded the experts by equaling the K. of C. sprint record in the prelims, this in competition with the nation's best sprinters.

In the high jump Vic Lawoyin, Ibadan, Nigeria, may top the Oberlin record of 6 feet 2¾ inches, and Peter Lund, freshman, has been clearing six feet. With Merritt Cleaver and Jack Coniam, frosh, vaulting over 12 feet, Rog Livingston and frosh Dave Fischer both under two minutes in the 880, Dave Miller, quarter miler, Jack Kepler, hurdler, Oberlin's fortunes on the oval should be in safe hands.

Bob Kretchmar's baseball team will, says Bob, "be long on experience and strong on defense." An all-senior infield, headed by captain Don Webster at first, should be Oberlin's best defensive unit in years. Kretchmar's biggest problem will be replacing Dave Hoecker, ace left-hander, who played a big part in the fact that the Yeomen won eight out of 14 last year.

Bruce Marcus, recently selected as a Rhodes Scholar, and Bob Huenefeld head a lacrosse team that Coach Cliff Stevenson took on an eastern training trip during spring vacation. They open April 12 with Denison. Lysle Butler is happy with six returning veterans from a tennis squad which last year won eight out of nine; but golf coach Bob Clark has only sophomore Tom Queen around which to mold a winning team.

At the 1924 Olympic Games held in Paris, Dan won the 110-meter high hurdles. He was a sophomore at the University of Illinois at the time.

Winter Round-up

In winter sports Oberlin won its fair share of honors in Ohio Conference competition. Bob Clark's cagers finished with a 12-6 record, best since 1951, and Homer (Ace) Gilchrist rewrote the record book for individual performances. High scorer in the Conference, with a 20-point average per game, Ace was selected All-Conference center.

Coach Ralph Bibler's swimmers finished a strong second in the Conference meet. Individual winners for the Yeomen were Dean Flower, who broke the Ohio Conference record in winning the 100 yard breaststroke in 1:12.6 and the Kenyon pool record in winning the 200 yard breaststroke in 2:42.4, and captain Stuart Smith, who also broke the Conference record in winning the 100 yard backstroke in 1:05.6.

The wrestlers tied for Conference honors with Akron University. Hank Danaceau, co-captain, pinned his man in the 137 pound finals, and Bill Skinner, co-captain won the 123 pound crown. Danaceau ended his collegiate competition with the remarkable record of 34 victories in 35 matches.

Commencement Preview 1958

President Stevenson welcomes returning alumni at the Alumni Luncheon held at the George M. Jones Field House last June. Mrs. Stevenson is on his right.

A. E. Princehorn

THE 125TH COMMENCEMENT promises to be BIG. Not often does a college celebrate an occasion as momentous as a century and a quarter of co-educational education. The first co-educational graduating class had twenty men and one woman, Zeruiah Porter, who later became Mrs. Edward Weed. Today — well, many things are changed today, and for those who have not been back to the campus in recent years Commencement this year offers you a real opportunity to see the progress that has been made as well as to renew acquaintance with the past, old friends, elm shaded walks, treasured memories.

Commencement Headquarters will be in Wilder Hall (Men's Building) which houses a Snack Bar on the lower floor, new, perhaps, to some of the older grads, but full of memories to those who left Oberlin within the last ten years. Commencement Exercises (weather willing) will be held out-of-doors, as they were last year, on the plaza of the Sophronia Brooks Hall Auditorium, on the east end of the campus. Flanked on one side by the Allen Art Museum, and on the other by the New Oberlin Inn, serving delicious meals in a lovely, modern setting, the Auditorium continues to attract flocks of visitors to Oberlin from all over the nation. You'll witness performances by the Oberlin Dramatic Association there and by Oberlin's famous Gilbert and Sullivan Players.

But to get back to Commencement Exercises. There will be an adequate seating section to accommodate all alumni desiring tickets (apply at Commencement Headquarters for tickets to everything). A special section on the plaza will be reserved for the 50th reunion class and all those who graduated prior to 1908. In case of rain, the exercises will be held in Finney Chapel.

The Alumni Luncheon is scheduled for Saturday noon, June 7, in the George M. Jones Field House at the athletic field. Here all alumni and faculty members, seniors and parents are welcome. The program will be snappy, the food will be good, the service swift. President and Mrs. Stevenson will be there to welcome you, and there will be the presentation of the annual Alumni Award for Distinguished Service to Oberlin. Winner of the award last year was Professor emeritus Frederick O. Grover. The Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association will be incorporated with the luncheon program. This is the first big get-together, where everybody sees everybody.

And for those of you who like sports — and who doesn't? — there will be plenty of opportunity to loll in the sun out on the athletic field to watch the Varsity tackle the Alumni in the annual baseball game on Friday afternoon and in a regularly scheduled intercollegiate baseball game on Saturday. Crane Pool will be open for alumni swimming on Saturday afternoon (men and women) for those who would rather be active than sedentary, and there is always the Alumni Golf Tournament at the Golf Course Saturday morning, with prizes for the skillful (and lucky!) but fun for everyone.

All this, of course, is only the beginning. There will be the Conservatory Concerts; the Commencement Band, performing on the plaza of Finney Chapel; the Alumni Sing; departmental open houses; faculty-alumni seminars on Friday and Saturday, where subjects of current interest will get an up-to-the-minute discussion; President and Mrs. Stevenson's reception at their home for alumni and friends; class reunions and get-togethers; the men's and women's banquets; and, above all, the one and only Illumination Night, with everyone strolling around under the Japanese lanterns on the campus, meeting everyone he somehow missed before.

And so, make your plans NOW to be in Oberlin on June 6-9. A full program of all the Commencement arrangements is being mailed to all of you. At that time you will get specific information about reservations, tickets, and where to write for what. But make up your mind RIGHT NOW, whether this is your reunion year or not, that you will be in Oberlin for the BIG 125th anniversary Commencement. You'll never forgive yourself if you don't come.

New Director of Development

The College's search for an experienced man to head the Development Program came to an end in the appointment of Charles F. Isackes, '38, as Director of Development. On April 1 he took over the role from C. Robert Keesey, assistant to the president, who has been serving very effectively as interim director for the past few years.

A native of Orwell, Vermont, Mr. Isackes is head of Charles French Isackes Associates, a private fundraising firm located in Cincinnati, Ohio. He has been engaged in fundraising since he completed his M.A. degree at Ohio State University in 1939.

He was field director for the Los Angeles Welfare Federation; executive secretary of Community Funds in Richmond, Indiana, and Lexington, Kentucky; assistant national campaign director for the National Safety Council; financial director for the National Travelers Aid Association; campaign and public relations director for the San Francisco Community Chest; general manager of the San Francisco United Fund.

He has been president of the Kentucky Conference of Social Welfare, vice-chairman of the Midwest Conference of Community Chests and Councils, and a member of the public relations and campaign advisory committees of Community Chests and Councils of America. He is married to the former Jean Knight, a graduate of Ohio State University; they have five children.

Oberlinians will remember Mr.

Isackes for his athletic prowess while an undergraduate: he played football, baseball, and tennis. He was also active in dramatic and musical organizations.

Honors Program

By action of the faculty the present program of independent studies was altered to conform more closely to the former Honors Program, and is to be so designated in the future. Students entering the program will complete a minor project in their junior year, which, if satisfactory, will admit them to honors work in their senior year. This will vary from department to department, but will always include independent work in seminars, private reading, research, or in the preparation of reports or papers. After taking a special examination at the end of the year the student may be recommended for any one of three degrees of distinction: cum laude, magna cum laude, or summa cum laude.

New Music Major

The Conservatory of Music, in collaboration with the Graduate School of Theology, is offering a new Major leading to the Bachelor of Music degree, a Major in Sacred Music. Designed for those who would normally major in organ or voice, this unique program of comprehensive instruction in church music will eventually be offered at both the undergraduate and graduate level. It will include courses in Old and New Testament Studies, Church History, Religious Education, as well as Music History, Conducting, Choral Organization, and Oratorio and Opera Literature. Work in the principal instrument (organ or voice) will continue throughout the four years, with required piano and language study.

This is Our Life

Oberlin Scientists

A recent study has revealed that 31.7 per cent of the juniors and seniors now enrolled in the College are majoring in science and that more than 500 graduates are now working in scientific fields. Among the alumni are teachers, administrators, and research specialists and technicians in a wide variety of fields. Basis of the alumni study was a survey of the National Academy of Science, published in 1957, and three volumes of American Men of Science, published in 1955 and 1956.

Modern Sculpture Exhibit

A special showing of modern sculpture for the Oberlin Friends of Art took place on February 20 when Professor Forbes Whiteside of the Art Department gave a gallery talk to over one hundred visitors. The exhibition has drawn considerable attention in the Northern Ohio area, especially among neighboring colleges and universities which arranged special tours for their art classes. The winter issue of the Allen Art Museum Bulletin contains a catalogue of the exhibition with beautiful illustrations of the twenty-three works of sculpture included.

The Oberlin Friends of Art is made up of Oberlin faculty, alumni, students, and others who contribute $3 to $50 in annual memberships for the purchase of works of art for the museum. Members receive three issues of the museum Bulletin each year, as well as announcements of special exhibitions and invitations to lectures, receptions and exhibition previews sponsored by the Museum. Alumni interested in joining the Friends of Art are urged to write to the museum.

Raise Tuition, Salaries

By action of the Board of Trustees a new salary scale for faculty and administrative officers will go into effect on July 1, 1958. To meet the cost of the increases the trustees raised the tuition in all three departments of the institution.

The new salary scale for the faculty ranges from $4,700 for beginning instructors to $12,500 for senior full professors, in comparison with the $4,225 to $10,725 range now in effect, an average rise of about 13 per cent. Administrative salaries were increased proportionately.

The annual tuition fee will go up from $750 to $950 in the College of Arts and Sciences, from $800 to $950 in the Conservatory of Music, and from $10 to $12 per course hour in the Graduate School of Theology. In conjunction with the tuition increase the College will broaden and increase its scholarship program to aid worthy students.

In announcing the new salary scale President Stevenson commented upon the fact that it would "help to maintain the high teaching standards from which Oberlin draws its strength." The new tuition rate is in line with increases all over the country and will be lower than many colleges comparable to Oberlin. At the new rate, the president said, "Oberlin students will still pay less than half the cost of their education."

Trustees Approve Scholarship Program

The Board of Trustees has approved a cash scholarship program for children of Oberlin faculty members as an addition to the present tuition-free plan at Oberlin and the Tuition Exchange Plan. Under the new arrangements, children of faculty members will be eligible for tuition scholarships at the institution of their choice. Grants will equal the amount of tuition at the institution by which they are accepted, or Oberlin's tuition, whichever is lower. Action of the trustees was a move toward making it possible for Oberlin to recruit and hold faculty of a high quality. The cash scholarship system is already in effect at Amherst, Bennington, Carleton, Dartmouth, Princeton, Wesleyan, and Williams.

Fund Honors Stevensons

An anonymous donor has presented to the College a gift of several thousand dollars to establish a library fund honoring President and Mrs. William E. Stevenson. Income from the gift is to be used, according to the donor, "for the purchase of books and similar facilities of special interest to members of the faculty and student body." The gift was made "in recognition of the significant contribution President and Mrs. Stevenson have made to higher learning through their capable and sacrificial labors at Oberlin College."

String Festival

The Third College-Community String Festival was held on January 11 at Finney Chapel, with Clifford A. Cook, '30, associate professor of stringed instruments and music education conducting. Some 150 musicians participated, including townspeople, students from the College and Conservatory, faculty, and public school students. Also performing on the program were the Oberlin Orchestra, the Oberlin String Quartet, and soloists Andor Toth, violin; William Berman, viola; and David Moyer, piano. The Festival String Orchestra played Ernest Bloch's Concerto Grosso with Piano Obligato, arranged by Professor Cook with five easier parts to be played with the more difficult original parts so that players from beginning to professional levels could perform.

CRD Fund Moves Ahead

The Consolidated Relief Drive, under the direction of Zeb Taintor, '58, Port Jefferson Station, New York, chairman of the steering committee, has embarked on its 1958 campaign for funds. Mr. Norman R. Shaw, '26, associate editor of the Cleveland Press, was speaker at the CRD Assembly which got the drive under way.

CRD came into existence after World War II to consolidate the various fund-raising organizations on campus. It is governed by a committee of nine students elected annually by the student body.

This year, by virtue of a student poll, CRD elected to highlight eight out of eighteen charities, in addition to giving nominal support to Casa Materna and Frau Emmy Bonhoeffer. The designated charities are: World University Service, Oberlin Refugee Student Committee, National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students, American Farm School, Heifer Project, Ludhiana Medical College, Committee on World Literacy and Help. Students also voted to contribute $180 each to support two children under the Foster Parents Plan and the Save the Children Federation.

The Consolidated Relief Drive of the students, headed by chairman Zeb Taintor, '58, got under way with a chapel address by Norman R. Shaw, '26, associate editor of the Cleveland Press. Above, Mr. Shaw stands between Zeb Taintor and President Stevenson in front of the Oberlin Inn prior to the CRD luncheon.

Under the Elms

Fair Fund, U. S. A.

In a campaign to seek nationwide collegiate support for greater United States participation in the 1958 Brussels World's Fair, undergraduates at Oberlin organized a student-faculty Fair Fund Committee. Headed by Garret A. Hobart, '58, New York City, the committee collected some $137.00 locally plus a contribution of $200 from the local Film Series for more extensive cultural exhibition, which they presented, in person, to Mr. Gerson Lush, head of the World's Fair Committee in Washington, D. C. The committee also presented to Senator Ives, member of the Senate appropriations committee, a petition signatures of some 480 Oberlin undergraduates urging wider cultural representation. Foremost in the mind of the committee was the fact that proposed participation by the United States falls far short of the exhibitions proposed by Russia and other iron curtain countries.

Gift for Chemical Research

The Department of Chemistry has been presented with an analytical balance, a highly sensitive weighing instrument used to determine minute amounts of such elements as carbon, hydrogen, and chlorine, by the Diamond Alkali Company, Painesville, Ohio. So sensitive that it must be used in an air-conditioned room and operated at a fixed distance to avoid the effects of body temperature, the balance is a welcome addition to the equipment in the analytical chemistry laboratory.

Contemporary Music Festival

The Eighth Annual Festival of Contemporary Music, February 20-22, brought to the campus as guest composer Leon Kirchner, professor of music at Mills College, Oakland, California. An accomplished pianist and recording artist, Kirchner played his Piano Sonata (1948) and Trio for Violin, Cello, and Piano (1954) and conducted the Oberlin Orchestra in Part I of Sinfonia (1951) and Toccata (1955).

Local composers honored at the Festival were Richard Hoffmann, instructor in Music Theory and Composition (Piano Variations, 1957), Paul Steg, assistant director of the Conservatory (String Quartet, 1957) and Joseph Wood, assistant professor of Music Theory and Composition (Piano Sonata, 1957). Works by five Conservatory seniors were also performed: Quintet for Clarinet, Piano, and Strings, by Frederick Lesemann, San

Library Gift

The College Library has received from Stanley B. Harkness, '04, his excellent personal collection of some one hundred items by and about Samuel Buder. Included is a first edition of Erewhon, besides numerous editions of The Way of All Flesh, a large number of critical works, and some unusual pieces, such as three musical works composed by Buder in the style of Handel.

Mr. Harkness is the author of The Career of Samuel Butler, 1835-1902: A Bibliography. He is a former professor of English at Brown, Chicago, and the University of Wisconsin.

Summer Math Institute

An eight-week Institute for high school teachers of mathematics will be held at Oberlin from June 16 to August 8 under a grant of $69,900 from the National Science Foundation. Professor Wade Ellis of the department of mathematics will direct the Institute, and Professors John D. Baum, Samuel Goldberg, and Robert R. Stoll will be members of the staff.

The Institute is designed to promote greater enthusiasm for science and mathematics and better teaching in these areas, and to effect a better understanding and appreciation between teachers at the high school and college levels.

Approximately fifty participants will attend the Institute. They will be selected from qualified high school teachers and 1958 college graduates who expect to become high school teachers of mathematics or science and who show capacity to develop as teachers and to profit from the program.

Yale-Princeton Game

The 52nd annual Yale-Princeton basketball game, prominent event of the Women's Athletic Association, held in Hales Memorial Gymnasium on February 13, ended with Princeton the 48-38 winner. Mary Jo Preising, '58, captain of the Princeton team, was high scorer for the second straight year. Anne Henderson, '58, captained the Yale team. Many of the traditions such as the ringing of the Chapel bell are still carried on. Winners of the traditional song contest that preceded the game were two sections of Dascomb, freshman dormitory singing The Rime of the Ancient Motto and Fantastique.

Elected to Office

Charles Parkhurst, director of the Allen Art Museum and chairman of the art department was elected president of the College Art Association of America at the annual meeting held in Washington, D. C., in February. Attending the meeting from Oberlin were Dr. Parkhurst, Professors Wolfgang Stechow, Edward Capps, Ellen Johnson, and Margaret Schauffler, and Miss Chloe Hamilton, Curator and Miss Loretta Wrentz. On February 6, Professor Parkhurst spoke at the Nelson Art Gallery, Kansas City, on the topic "Quality and Judgment in Art."

Cliff Stevenson, assistant professor of physical education, attended the National Soccer Coaches Association meetings in New York City on January 11, where he was elected assistant secretary-treasurer of the Association. At the convention he presented a paper dealing with all aspects of the coaching of soccer, as chairman of the Teaching Methods Committee, and presented a lecture-discussion on instructional techniques for teaching skills. He was also mid-west representative of the N. C. A. A. Soccer Rules Committee.

Professor Elbridge P. Vance, chairman of the department of mathematics, attended the national conference on academically talented students in Washington, D. C., February 6-8. He served as recorder for the group discussing "Educating the Academically Talented Secondary School Pupil in Mathematics."

Luke E. Steiner, '24, chairman of the department of chemistry spoke on A Single General Chemistry Course for College Students at the annual meeting of the Ohio Academy of Science held in Akron, April 10-12. He also attended the meeting of the American Chemical Society held in San Francisco, April 14-17.

Honored

President William E. Stevenson was invited by the White House to attend a national conference on "The Foreign Aspects of United States National Security" in Washington, February 25.

Daniel Harris, professor of singing, was re-elected president of the National Opera Association at the annual convention held December 27 and 28 in Evanston, Illinois. During the fall months he worked with the Canton Civic Opera, which performed two contemporary one-act operas, Suzanne's Secret and Annabl and the Night Visitors. In May he will go to Korea for two months under the State Department's International Education Exchange Program to hold conferences and give a series of lectures in the music schools of Korea under the direction of the Cultural Attache of the American Embassy at Seoul.

Norman P. Sacks, professor of Spanish, on leave of absence the second semester, was invited by the Foreign Service Institute of the United States Department of State to lecture in Washington on January 23 and 24 to Air Force units going to Spain on assignments. His general topic was "Spain since 1931." An article of his entitled "Herbert Matthews Reports on Spain," was published in the December, 1957, issue of Hispania.

Professor Carl E. Howe, chairman of the department of physics, is a member of the Committee on Design of Physics Buildings of the American Physics Teachers Association. With some 400 colleges and universities interested in the modernizing of and the building of new physics buildings, the Committee met in New York City in March to set up a program for presentation to a Conference in April.

Harvey Cox, director of religious activities and YMCA executive secretary, has resigned, effective the end of the academic year. Mr. Cox has received a Campus Christian Workers Grant for 11 months of graduate study from the Danforth Foundation, and plans to study contemporary theology and philosophy of religion at Harvard University beginning in September.

Presents Mss. to Museum

Frederick B. Artz, professor of history, has given his collection of some 42 manuscript pages and four woodcut pages to Allen Art Museum. On frequent exhibit in the print room of the Museum since 1938, the collection will now be permanently housed there. Among some of the colorful and rare items are a double leaf from a Carolingian New Testament, dating from the ninth century, and three leaves from a 15th century Franco-Flemish Book of Hours, with delicately colored miniatures of St. Julian, St. Christopher, and the Coronation of the Virgin.

Symphony No. 3 by Joseph Wood, assistant professor of composition and music theory, was performed in Carnegie Hall, New York, Sunday, February 16 at 5:30 p. m. under the baton of Leon Barzin. The occasion was an orchestral concert sponsored by the National Association for American Composers and Conductors and was broadcast by WNYC (City of New York Municipal Broadcasting System) as part of that station's nineteenth annual American Music Festival. Professor Wood conducted the premiere performance of the symphony last February at Oberlin. Of that presentation The Musical Quarterly said in part, "It is an exciting, dramatic, and tightly integrated work . . . orchestrated in a brilliant style which is effective in the best sense of the word."

Publishes

Miss Eileen Thornton, librarian, is the author of an article "Cooperation Among Colleges," which appeared in the January issue of Library Trends. She is president of the Association of College and Research Libraries, a branch of the American Library Association.

TEN THOUSAND STRONG

by Dorothy M. SMITH, '29

1896

For the past 23 years, Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. Patterson have conducted the Patterson School of Music in Sandusky, O. Both of them still teach full schedules and keep fit with outdoor sports.

1898

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Kuns celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, March 16, with a reception at the First Presbyterian Church in Fremont, Ohio where they have lived all their married life. Mr. Kuns is a retired civil and professional engineer. He served as a Sandusky county engineer as well as deputy engineer in Sandusky, Seneca, and Erie counties, during his over thirty years of service.

Albert C. Norris was a hospital patient from December 29 to January 11 in the Allen Memorial Hospital in Oberlin, Ohio, but says "I was really ill, but am feeling much better now."

At the instigation of Carl W. Peirce, class president, the Class of 1900 got out a class letter recently. We pass along, here, a word from the various members responding.

Albert A. Agenbroad, Piqua, Ohio, retired from practicing corporation law in 1930, and is living on a farm in Miami County, with his wife, who, he writes, "persuaded me to attend Oberlin College."

LaRue Richard Boals, Youngstown, Ohio, "still a bachelor" and still active, has been music director of WFMJ and music critic for the Youngstown Vindicator for 40 years. His long-playing record library now numbers 1,400, including 80 complete operas!

Mrs. W. Frederick Bohm, Oberlin, Ohio, "a member of the class only by marriage," writes that she is still living in her home on Oak Street, and "expect to remain here as long as I am able to care for it, for I love Oberlin!"

Grace Charles, River Forest, Illinois, keeps active with an International Relations study group and the 19th Century Woman's Club. A while back she gave a talk on Lincoln's religion. She enjoys her summers at Crystal Lake, Michigan, where she is constantly seeing Oberlin friends.

John P. Davies, Alexandria, Virginia, writes that he belongs "to a large active church and have plenty of social life and fine friends." Last spring he visited his son John in Peru, South America.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Merle Davis (Valborg Johnson Veal), Palo Alto, California, are both in good health and enjoying life, just past the 80 mark, with three daughters and their families all "within motoring distance" keeping them "young in spirit." Son Jerome, '28, general manager of the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company's Japan field was just in California.

Carl E. Day, Bradenton, Florida and (and Weeping Water, Nebraska), active for 60 years producing meats and cereals in Nebraska and citrus and vegetables in Florida, is "on the bench now, but with new scientific methods of soil and water conservation, fertilizers, chemicals, sprays, dusts, my education is still going on." He and Mrs. Day divide their time between two sons, one in Florida, one in Nebraska.

Helen Wright Dutton, Palo Alto, California, writes that it will "be a wrench to see all the old places go" (in connection with the building program). "However," she continues, "they can't deprive us of what we learned and felt there."

Lora D. Fowler, Niles, Michigan, is keeping active looking after the children of an adopted son while their mother is employed, attending regular church services, working with the St. Joseph Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Dr. and Mrs. Paul Fox (Rosa Olive Cobb), Duluth, Minnesota, do not find time "hanging heavy on their hands." Last June Paul saw the publication of his book The Polish National Church. They are enjoying their four children and six grandchildren, all "doing well."

ACCEPTS NEW PASTORATE AT 83. At an age when most men would be looking back upon twenty years of leisure, Rev. S. K. Emurian, t. '01, has accepted the call to a new pastorate at Lynnhaven Colony Chapel, London Bridge, Virginia. Since his "retirement" at the age of 75 he has worked to organize or revive four churches in the Norfolk Presbytery, which brings to a total of fourteen the churches he has served since his first pastorate at Park Avenue Church in Norfolk in 1918. Born in Moonjissoon, near Caesarea, Capadocia, Asia Minor, Rev. Emurian migrated to America in 1918. He came to Oberlin intending to make a career of music, but on the advice of President Henry Churchill King and Professor Edward Increase Bosworth he entered the Theological Seminary. His interest in music, however, has led him to write many gospel songs and publish an Armenian Song Book. In 1956 he was honored by the Division of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the publication of East Meets West, which told the story of his life as one of the "most dramatic sagas" of the Protestant Church history in America. He is pictured above with his wife, Mrs. Emurian.

Harriet Bates Gould, Miami Beach, Florida, spends about eight months of the year in Miami Beach, taking an active part in church activities, a Woman's Club, a garden club, and a chapter of the D.A.R. Her husband (William E.) "will not give up his business" and so he "commutes" from up north, on ten day visits.

Mrs. George W. Grant (C. Willow Handy), Bucyrus, Ohio, writes that "life on the whole has treated me kindly." Both she and her husband are "well, comfortable and contented, surrounded by old friends and neighbors."

Arthur J. and Martha Miller Harvey, San Juan, Puerto Rico, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last August 28th at the home of their son, Arthur, Jr., in Shaker Heights, Ohio. Martha has recovered from a severe operation at the Cleveland Clinic a year ago last summer. They are looking forward to their 60th reunion.

Anna Maude Bebout Holmes decided last September to enter the Osborn Memorial Home, Harrison, New York, where she has enjoyed association with a fellow member of the Natural Museum of History and others who are sharing the conveniences for comfort and happiness there. She writes that she is "still active" and keeps well.

Mrs. Russell P. Jameson (Florence Heath), of Oberlin, Ohio, writes that she "lives very quietly in my own home and do not go out often." She keeps a student in the house to drive her car for her. Once in a while she "goes to a Woman's Society meeting or a Section meeting."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl R. Kimball, Madison, Ohio, are both active. Carl is executive treasurer of the Andrews School for Girls in Willoughby, and Ethel teaches piano there four days a week. "So we have the pleasure of a drive together every day through country pastures of beautiful nursery land." They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary by a trip to Honolulu, arranged for them by their children, William, and Caroline, '28, (Mrs. P. T. Feun).

S. Genevieve Little, Appena, Michigan, is living with her sister and finding herself kept busy attending church services, group meetings, and teaching a Sunday School class.

Joseph R. Miller, Binghamton, New York, retired in 1954 from a position with the engineering and construction company of Arthur G. McKee, Cleveland. His work was largely devoted to reports on iron and steel projects and methods, with foreign contacts in Canada, Mexico, Brazil. At 80 he is sorry he retired, for he is "sound of wind and limb, and nowhere near ready."

B. Bradford Mills, Los Angeles, California, until his recent retirement, was a "free-lance promoter and manager of musical attractions, notably operatic." He booked transcontinental tours of opera companies (like the San Carlo) and light opera (Gilbert and Sullivan).

Mrs. Herbert L. Oviatt (Rose May Munger), Warsaw, New York, writes that "life has been very good to me." With an older sister she is "making a home for three girls about our own age (boarders) in this little quiet village. We do all our own work, including the care of a cherished garden. We are a block from the church which is the center of our social life."

Bertha E. Pratt, Santa Barbara, California, writes that she is moving to San Diego, "where there are Oberlinites and other friends." As of the time of writing, she had no permanent address.

De Forest Roe, Bronxville, New York, retired in 1953, purchased a house with his daughter and her husband, and lives with them, with his wife, Sara, as a family of four. He and his wife have taken on a few civic and church duties. A recent invention brought him a check for $600 from the U. S. Steel Corporation. He enjoys going into New York to the theater now and then.

Robert D. Rose and his wife (Amy Adelpa Royce), Warsaw, New York, write that they "have been quiet and sequestered, but not to the extent of being cloistered." The last few years "have been filled with reading, all the exercise we need, church attendance, and a modicum of social activity."

Julia G. Severance, San Diego, California, finds her activities "quite unspectacular but I manage to be decidedly busy." In addition to keeping house, working in the garden, there are the "activities of the studio" that "require an all or nothing devotion to accomplish anything worth while." Lately she has turned to wood carving, and, in the garden, to raising "strange plants which have adapted themselves to drought."

Jay Ellis Staunard, Brooklyn, New York, finds himself "general housekeeper," now that Miriam, his wife, is crippled with arthritis. For 33 years he taught chemistry in Boys High School, Brooklyn, but now "leads a quiet life, but a busy one, what with magazine work" and other activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Arthur Stetson (Ethel Martha Bartlett), Elyria, Ohio, have "children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois." Frank is "still practicing law, not knowing anything else to do." (As we go to press word has just reached us of Mrs. Stetson's death. She had been in poor health for several years.)

Mrs. Carroll L. Storey (Mary Grant Shurtleff), Detroit, Michigan, is living with her sister, Laura Shurtleff Price, '93, and an old friend, Lucy Jane Giddings. "It would be hard for me to try to get along without them." She is "able to get around in my car, though I do not attempt to do much of anything outside my home besides attending my church activities and making calls on the sick."

Harriet Bell Storrs, Orlando, Florida, has "sold the ancestral home where I had lived the most of my life" and bought a new place in Painesville, Ohio, where she will spend her summers.

Mrs. O. Bruce Swift (Martha Storrs), Buffalo, New York, is finding her arthritic condition getting a little the better of her. She has been an avid reader in recent years. Bruce, her husband, though retired, has continued ad interim preaching, funerals, weddings, and is still active in the Salisbury Club.

Josephine Walker, Forest Grove, Oregon, has lived in Oregon for a number of years since retiring after 40 years as a missionary in China. She writes that she enjoys her Sunday School and church.

Mrs. Robert Owen Williams (Ethel Caroline Baird), Claremont, California, says that she has been "just a housewife" through the years, "much interested in Sunday School work." She is living in Pilgrim Place in Clermont, occupied mostly by retired missionaries, ministers, and YMCA and YWCA workers.

Albert C. Durand and his wife, the former Ruth Sawyer, have been living in Boston during the winter. He writes, "I fly to Mexico April first to be with my daughter and her husband (Robert McCloskey) for a month."

RUTH SCHOEFFEL MORRISON
1892-1957

THE PASSING of Ruth Schoeffel Morrison on August 25, 1957, brought to a close a life dedicated to the enrichment of the younger generation through the association of music.

Mrs. Morrison graduated from the Oberlin Conservatory with the Bachelor of Music degree in 1917. After teaching one year at the Olivet Conservatory of Music, Olivet, Michigan, she returned to Oberlin, and taught in the Children's Department of the Conservatory. After several years of further study in Europe, she also taught in the Adult Piano Department.

In 1948 she retired with her husband to Franklin, Michigan.

For many years Mrs. Morrison was organ at Ohio Northern University, Ada, O., for 32 years and having retired for 5 years, has accepted an invitation to return to the campus to teach organ. During his retirement he has been teaching privately and serving as organist of First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Lima. Last summer he was instrumental in securing a gift for the modernization and enlarging of the organ in Lehr Auditorium. He gave the dedication recital in April. Mr. and Mrs. Lamale (Maude Hughes, '09) have three children: William, Jr., columnist with the Post-Telegram of Bridgeport, Conn.; Joyce Lamale Ford, teacher in the Mansfield, O., schools; and Gerald, nuclear physicist with Battelle Research Institute, Columbus, O. They are the proud grandparents of 3 grandsons and 3 granddaughters.

1911

Clifford Frederick Martin, former state legislator and husband of Ruth Moxcey died after a brief illness in Woodbury, Connecticut. Mr. and Mrs. Martin had two daughters, Mrs. Tanju Ergil (Helen, '41) of San Mateo, California, and Elizabeth, '37, of New York City.

1913

Alma Swan has been a librarian at the Evansville, Ind., Public Library for the past ten years.

1914

Carleton Nicholson has retired from public accounting and tax work in northern New York, a very important person to many of the faculty and townspeople. She taught our children not only how to play the piano, but developed in them their first understanding and love of music in general.

Mrs. Morrison also had a very exceptional ability to develop pianistic skill in children, and many of her young pupils entered the Conservatory to graduate and follow a successful musical career.

One of her pupils wrote at the time of her death: "Every lesson offered some remark which contained an impetus for development of thought on Philosophy, Religion, respect to mankind, and of the relation of the beauty and art of music to these subjects."

"The study of piano was never approached from a mere technical, or musical aspect — there was also reflection and evaluation of the musical message and search for a deeper, profound feeling and projection. This attitude of itself precluded a detached, superficial manner toward music, and its value and effect upon mankind."

Mrs. Morrison's teaching career is over, but what she taught, her ideals, her love of beauty in nature and music, will live on through her students for many years to come.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hill (Florence Rastson, k), drove east to visit their daughter Rachel, Mrs. Kent Murmann and young son, Steven, born January 2. Dr. Murmann is assistant professor of chemistry at the University of Connecticut. While east they visited their son, Dick, '50, who sang the role of the King at the Premiere of Deems Taylor's opera The Dragon, on February 6-8 at the Hall of Fame Playhouse on the New York University campus. Dick was one of three professionals who assisted members of the University Opera Workshop in the production.

LaMoille Pugh has returned to Santa Barbara, Calif., where she has established a Secretarial Center at 13B East Canon Perdido St. She finds plenty of variety in the jobs brought to her and is enjoying the work.

Margaret Hammaker, k'23, writes from Harding House, Sholapur, India: "In this kindergarten training college established by Mary B. Harding, we feel we are still doing pioneer work in the field of pre-primary education. India has not gone very far in this field. We hope to start a pre-primary education society in a few weeks here - working with a Montessori-minded group. . . . I hope I will recognize Oberlin on my next furlough - what with all the new building plans! I hope all the landmarks will not have disappeared!"

Amy Powell is social director at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu.

WINS BEST ACTRESS AWARD. Lucila Boscana Cabanas, '35, is the winner for the second consecutive year of the trophy as the best actress of the year in Puerto Rico. A graduate of Oberlin in the Class of 1935, she majored in Spanish with the intention of becoming a teacher. But after a few years in the classroom at Ponce and Mayaguez, she turned to the theater, where her talents soon brought her outstanding success. With the growth of radio and television she broadened the scope of her activities, and her name was soon known by everyone on the island. In 1954 she married Sr. Francisco Cabanas, director of a Spanish theatrical company which was touring Central America and the Caribbean area. At present, she lives with her husband and her mother in Santurce, a residential suburb of San Juan.

Arnulf Baumann, stm, writes: "After returning home from the U.S. in October, I started my work here at Uslar (Germany) in November. This is one step in my post university education for the ministry, according to the rules of my church, the Lutheran Church of Hannover. It's something like an interne in American churches — is meant to give some experience in practical church work (which we usually don't get before we finish the theological studies). It will end this spring, when the next step will follow."

The engagement of Andrea Bear to William A. Rugh, '58, was announced in February.

Nancy Brandes and Robert Tallmadge Root were married on Feb. 15 in Pittsburgh, Pa. They are living in Washington, D. C.

Daniel Finke returned to New York City in October and worked as a linotype operator until late February when he went on six months active duty with the Medical Corps. He is stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, but expects to be out of service in time to start classes in the fall at the College of Forestry, Syracuse University.

Conrad Malicoat spent the fall and early winter in Paris, returning to New York early in February. He is studying sculpture for the spring term at the Brooklyn Museum Art School and is living at 403 E. 8 St., New York City.

A spring wedding is planned by Mary Marcus and L. William Buchbinder. Bill is a graduate of New York Military Academy and Syracuse University.

A late summer wedding is planned by Adrienne Motter and Warren D. Strandberg. Adrienne is teaching in the Timber Ridge School of Evanston, Ill. Warren, a '57 graduate from the University of Minnesota, is a graduate student in education and guidance at Northwestern University.

A June wedding is planned by Deborah Aronson of Harrisburg, Pa., and Robert L. Stern. Deborah is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. She and Bob are both graduate students in chemistry at Johns Hopkins University.

Pfc. Myron Szold is stationed in Welfflehen, Germany. "We are some ten miles from the East German border, a fact constantly impressed on the troops. We are also high enough in the mountains for there to be snow ten months of the year. Since they're using me as a supply clerk at present, I can sit in relatively warm supply room while the rest of the outfit is out climbing mountains. . . ."

Suzanne Wilke and Richard R. Garnache were married on Jan. 25 in Orono, Me. Suzanne wore a white organdy gown with chapel-length train which had been worn by her maternal great-grandmother in 1877. Sue transferred to the University of Maine after two years at Oberlin and is completing her degree (sociology major) in June. Dick served four years in the Navy and is completing his junior year as an engineering physics major at Maine.

Elsa Walther and Robert Pendleton were married on Jan. 25 in West Shore Unitarian Church, Cleveland, O. They are completing their senior year at Oberlin.

Christopher "Kit" Barthel, III, transferred to the School of Business at Northwestern University. He is a junior, majoring in transportation. He has a new home address, as his family have moved into a new house, but still in Northbrook, Ill. — 1135 Jeffrey C.

Mrs. Francis Boyer (Margaret Morrison) writes that her husband is in the Navy, stationed at Patuxent River Naval Air Station. They have a son almost a year old and are expecting another child in May.

LOSSES IN THE OBERLIN FAMILY

HUTCHINS — Dr. William James Hutchins, president emeritus of Berea College and formerly beloved professor of homiletics at the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology, died at the Berea College Hospital on February 20, 1958. He was 86.

Born in Brooklyn, New York, July 5, 1871, he attended the Oberlin Academy and Oberlin College before transferring to Yale University, where he graduated in 1892. Returning to Oberlin, he studied at the Oberlin Theological Seminary for two years and then went to Union Theological Seminary, graduating in 1896. He was ordained that year as a Presbyterian minister, and, the same year, married Anna L. Murch, s. '96.

After three years as pastor of the Bedford Church in Brooklyn, he joined the faculty at the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology, where he taught until 1920, when he was called to Berea. He retired in 1939. In 1940 he became an adviser to the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Missouri. In 1953, he retired from this post and made his home once more in Berea, Kentucky.

The author of many books, including The Preacher's Inspiration and Ideals and The Religious Experience of Israel, he received at one time an award of $5,000 for his Code of Morals from the National Institute for Moral Instruction. He was the recipient of honorary degrees from Oberlin College, Yale University, Marietta College, the University of Chicago, the University of Kentucky, Berea College, and the University of Louisville.

He served on numerous committees and commissions, traveling in India (1930-31) as a member of the Commission on Higher Christian Education in India. Last May the Danforth Foundation established the William J. Hutchins Lectureship at Berea College in recognition of his long and faithful service to the Foundation and to Berea College.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, William G., of Asheville, North Carolina, School for Boys, Robert M., New York, president of The Fund for the Republic, and Francis S., who succeeded him as president of Berea College; and nine grandchildren.

CUSHING — Mrs. Charles Hayward Cushing (Della Josephine Folger) died May 18, 1957, in Elyria Memorial Hospital, Elyria, Ohio, after a short illness. She was 86.

Born February 21, 1872, in Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Cushing moved to Elyria, Ohio, with her family when she was 8 years old. She graduated from Oberlin College in 1895 with a major in physical education. She also studied in the Conservatory of Music. On December 4, 1895, she married Charles Hayward Cushing, '94, and went to live at the Cushing residence, where her husband had been born and where she lived until her death. Dr. Cushing died May 15, 1925.

A great lover of music, Mrs. Cushing was active in the Elyria Musical Art Society, of which she was a charter member, and served as honorary vice-president. Active, also, in literary and civic organizations, she was a member of the Midtown Circle of the First Congregational Church, the Lorain County Historical Society, the Elyria Garden Club, the Elyria Country Club, the Fortnightly Club, and the Great Books Discussion Group. For two years she was president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Elyria Memorial Hospital, and a member of the Board for 24 years. She was chairman of the Finance Committee of the YWCA for 6 years, and was also active in the AAUW.

Survivors include three sons: Dr. Thomas F., '20, of Elyria; Charles F., '22, of Raymond, Maine; John T. of Winter Park, Florida; seven grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. C. M. Braman, of Elyria, and Mrs. A. D. Pettibone of Cleveland.

RAYMOND — The Reverend C. (Clarence) Rexford Raymond, D.D., retired Congregational Christian Minister, died on January 15 at the Cushing Hospital, Framingham, Massachusetts.

He was 85. At the time of his death he lived at 43 Brooks Street, Maynard, Massachusetts.

Born in Evans, New York, February 29, 1872, Dr. Raymond was the son of Lyman Rexford Raymond, M.D., and Rosella Elizabeth Rynick. He attended school at Angola Academy, and when he was ready for college, the whole family moved to Oberlin. Here he won first place in the Oratorical Contest in his sophomore year, an honor usually held by seniors. He graduated from the Oberlin Preparatory Department in 1891, and from Oberlin College in 1895. While in College he was editor of the Hi-O-Hi and the Oberlin Review. From Oberlin he went on to become a student at Andover Theological School. After his first year, President Frost persuaded him to teach English and Greek at Berea College. In 1900 he received his B.D. degree from Oberlin College, and in June of that year he married Estella Rose Landon of Angola, New York. She died in 1948. In 1949 Dr. Raymond married Mrs. Lillian B. Miles, who lives in Southern Pines, North Carolina.

He began his ministerial work in 1900 at the Second Congregational Church of Oberlin, Ohio. He then served as pastor of the First Congregational Church in Bellevue, Ohio. His next post was as Minister to the First Congregational Church in Flushing, New York. Following this he was called to the South Congregational Church, Greeley, Colorado; Pilgrim Congregational Church in Chattanooga, Tennessee; and the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, North Carolina. Dr. Raymond then had Interim Pastorates and worked for "The Debt of Honor," the annuity fund for Congregational Ministers. From 1918-23 he served as Dean of Religious Education and College Preacher at Berea College, Berea, Kentucky. In 1914 Berea bestowed on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. His last church was the Circular Congregational Church in Charleston, South Carolina. In 1950 he retired to live with his daughter Ruth, Mrs. Thomas E. Bailey, in Frederick, Maryland.

Although Dr. Raymond was an enthusiastic golfer, amateur photographer, and camper, his greatest love was poetry. After the death of his first wife he compiled a little volume of sonnets in her memory, Immortal Love. The Cleveland Plain Dealer stated in a review "the discerning readers will note, behind the measured cadence of the lines and the wealth of imagery, the lambent glow of affection for a lifelong helpmate and, especially in the epilogue, the author's intimations of his belief in personal immortality. A sonnet group of high excellence."

Survivors include his two daughters, Ruth (Mrs. Thomas E. Bailey), of Frederick, Maryland, and Dorothy (Mrs. Orville D. Ulom) of Maynard, Massachusetts; two grandchildren and one great-granddaughter, all of Haverhill, Massachusetts; and a sister, Miss Ellen R. Raymond, of Evanston, Illinois.

WHITNEY — Frank Peck Whitney, retired principal of Collinwood High School, died November 12, 1957, in Cleveland, Ohio. He was 83.

Born in North Fairfield, Ohio, September 11, 1875, he studied in both the Academy and the College, graduating in 1898. He received his M.A. from Oberlin in 1907.

Mr. Whitney devoted his life to teaching, starting while still an undergraduate by teaching part-time in Wakeman, Ohio, where he continued after graduation until 1900. On August 19, 1902, he married Maude Eugenia Silliman. They had four children, all graduates of Oberlin.

In 1900 Mr. Whitney went to Cleveland, as principal of one of the schools in Collinwood, then a suburb of Cleveland. In 1910, when Collinwood was annexed to Cleveland, he became assistant principal of Glenville High School; then in 1913, assistant principal, and in 1916 principal of Collinwood Junior High School. From 1919-22 he was principal of West Technical High School, and from 1923-25 assistant superintendent of the Cleveland Public Schools. He became principal of the new Collinwood High School in 1925, and remained there until his retirement in 1944.

During his career in the Cleveland school system, Mr. Whitney, as director of school housing, beginning in 1919, was instrumental in enforcing fireproof construction in the more than twenty-six million dollars worth of school construction that came under his guidance. For many years he was president of the Cleveland Library Board and trustee of the East Cleveland Library Board. He was also a trustee of the Child Guidance Clinic and the Ohio State Conference of Congregational Churches, and trustee of Schauffler College.

His early publications include numerous articles in the Education Review. In 1955, his book The Changing High School was published by the Exposition Press, and posthumously, The School and I was published last winter.

Survivors include his wife and four children: Charles, '26, of Homewood, Illinois; Mrs. Clifford Fulton (Elizabeth, '28), of Willoughby, Ohio; Mrs. Howard E. Richards (Clara, '31) of Cleveland, Ohio; and D. Ransom, '36, of Columbus, Ohio.

NEWTON — Mrs. Nathan Alexander Newton (Mary Savage), active club woman and lecturer, died February, 1958, in Oil City, Pennsylvania. She was 80 years old.

Born November 5, 1878, in Warren, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Newton graduated from Oberlin Phi Beta Kappa in 1901. After teaching for a year in Amenia, North Dakota, she returned to Pennsylvania to teach in the Oil City High School, a post she held for the next seven years.

On August 31, 1912, she married Nathan Alexander Newton, regional sales manager for the National Transit Pump and Machine Company. They had one daughter, Jane, born May 2, 1913, who died in Oxford, England, on August 26, 1929, of typhoid fever contracted during a summer abroad.

Mrs. Newton was an ardent worker in the Oil City-Franklin branch of the American Association of University Women and a prominent lecturer in various women's clubs during her years of activity. She served as president of the AAUW for four years, was chairman of its international relations group, and organized various groups within the organization. She was also a past president of the Oil City branch of the National League of American Pen Women, past president and secretary of the Belles Lettres Club, a member of the Tuesday Musicales Club, and past president of the Oil City Council of Parent-Teacher Association. She was a member of the Second Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Newton is survived by her husband.

ROBERTS — Ellwyn C. Roberts, real estate and insurance broker and widely known Ohio poet, died at his home in Canton, Ohio, on January 18 at the age of 80. He had been retired since 1953 because of a serious heart ailment.

Mr. Roberts was born May 24, 1878, in Willoughby, Ohio. He received his A.B. from Oberlin in 1902 and his A.M. in 1903. He started his career as a teacher of mathematics and physics in Lake Erie College, Painesville, Ohio, and in the Canton and Akron High Schools. In 1906 he left teaching to join the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, Akron, and from 1911-16 served as manager of the employment and time office of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company of the same city. He married Gertrude Oberlin, '04, Conservatory student, on June 28, 1906.

He left Firestone in 1916 to establish a life insurance business in Akron, and later moved to Canton to enter the real estate and insurance firm of his father-in-law, Mr. Adam Oberlin. When Mr. Oberlin retired in 1921, Mr. Roberts continued the business, incorporating with George E. Allen in 1932. During the time he operated the agency Mr. Roberts was also employed as a deputy in the County Auditor's office.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, three of whom died before him. Oliver Oberlin, '29, died October 1, 1939; Frederick Clare, '33, died March 27, 1944; Judith Eleanor died August 9, 1923.

Mr. Roberts was well known throughout Ohio for his poetry, which was published in a number of newspapers, magazines, and anthologies. He was instrumental in organizing the North Canton Poetry Society, and in 1945 was made an honorary member of the Eugene Field Society. He was the author of a little book of verse entitled G. I. Joe in the War, dedicated to his son Frederick, '33, who died in service.

He was past president of the Canton Real Estate Board. He was also a former president of the Canton Optimist Club, and organized and sponsored the North Canton Optimist Club and Parent-Teachers Association. He was a member and former elder of the Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church and of the Stark County Historical Society. He was a past president of the Stark County Oberlin Alumni Association, an active alumnus who opened his home to alumni gatherings and a loyal supporter of the College.

Surviving him are his widow, Gertrude, his son Addison William, of Benton Harbor, Michigan, and three grandchildren.

CALDWELL — Mrs. John Hadley Caldwell (Ida Westlake) retired physician, died October 31, 1957, in Covington, Kentucky, just ten days after the death of her husband, who was also a physician. She was 74.

Born October 30, 1883, in Danville, Ohio, Dr. Caldwell received both the A.B. and P.T. degrees from Oberlin College in 1905. She received her medical degree from Cincinnati Medical School in 1912, and on August 26, 1919, she married Dr. John Hadley Caldwell, physician and surgeon.

She started her career as physical education director of the Cincinnati YWCA before entering medical school. After receiving her M.D. degree she practiced medicine in Cincinnati until 1919, serving as visiting physician for the Babies Milk Fund Association, and later as clinician. From 1919 until 1957 she practiced in Newport, Kentucky, where she was living with her husband.

Always active in civic affairs, Dr. Caldwell was for several years secretary of the Newport Health and Welfare League, physician for the Baby Welfare Clinic, a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the American Medical Society, a member of the Newport Women's Club, and an elder of the First Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include her sister, Florence Westlake, '02, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and several cousins.

WESTLAKE — Lucy Jane Westlake, retired Oberlin College girls' dormitory director, died unexpectedly on February 16, 1958, after a brief five-day illness. She was 70.

Born April 3, 1882, in Bernick Haven, Ohio, Miss Westlake entered Oberlin College and received both her A.B. and P.T. degree in 1906. After graduation, she took a position as physical education instructor and association secretary of the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, YWCA. She went from there to Detroit, Michigan, where she served as teacher of physical education in the Liggett School. She later became a library assistant in the Detroit Public Library and with the Library of the Woman's Club of Detroit.

In 1933 she returned to Oberlin as assistant director of May Cottage, and the following year was made director of Shurtleff Cottage, a position she held until 1939. She was much beloved by the students and all her associates in the college, who found in her a person of real warmth and understanding, always cheerful, always helpful.

She is survived by one sister, Florence Westlake, '02, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and by several cousins. She was preceded in death by her sister Dr. Ida Caldwell, who died on October 31, 1957.

A memorial fund is being established in her name for the Oberlin Shansi Memorial Association, and donations may be made at the Shansi Office in Wilder Hall. Funds will be used to purchase books needed in the Shansi schools abroad.

unexpectedly in Galesburg on March 2, 1958. He was 75.

Born June 25, 1882, in Lebanon, Kentucky, he graduated from the George Williams YMCA College in 1908. After serving the Fargo, North Dakota, and St. Joseph, Missouri, YMCA's, he fulfilled his boyhood dream by graduating from Oberlin in 1914. On June 17, 1916 he married Edna Viola Zetterberg, who died in 1932. They had one daughter, Edna Louise.

For a time he held the post of assistant physical director at the University of Kansas, where he studied basketball under Dr. James Naismith, founder of the game.

During World War I he served as YMCA advisor at Camp Taylor, Kentucky. Then, after positions in the YMCA at St. Joseph, Missouri, and Paris, Kentucky, Mr. Harrison became general secretary of the YMCA at Newcastle, Indiana, where he spear-headed their successful building drive. He held a similar position with the YMCA at Newburgh, New York, for fifteen years, taking an active part in community and religious affairs.

After his retirement in 1942 he moved to Galesburg, Illinois. Here he operated a Service-men Center during World War II, and later gave a very successful public speaking course. During the last ten years he was engaged in the real estate business, serving as president of the Real Estate Board for four terms. He was active in several civic and church groups at the time of his death.

He was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, the First Presbyterian Church of Galesburg, Kiwanis, and the Louisville Masonic Lodge. He was the author of a book on physical training and numerous articles.

Survivors include his wife, the former William Patterson, whom he married in July, 1942; a daughter, Mrs. Edward W. Dempsey, of Annapolis, Maryland; a sister, Mrs. S. K. Crawford, of Arlington, Virginia; and four grandchildren.

de LAUBENFELS — Max Walker de Laubenfels, professor of zoology at Oregon State College, and international authority on sponges, died February 4, 1958, in Corvallis, Oregon. He was 64.

Born May 9, 1894, in Mount Pleasant, Iowa, Mr. de Laubenfels received his A.B. from Oberlin in 1916 and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Stanford University in 1926 and 1929. He married Beth Jones, '23, sister of Professor George T. Jones of Oberlin College, on August 10, 1921. They had five children, four sons and a daughter.

After graduating from Oberlin, Mr. de Laubenfels became an assistant foreman with the Corn Products Refining Company, La Grange, Illinois, and then accepted a position with the Mathews Advertising Agency, Chicago.

In 1923, he started a career in teaching at Pasadena, California, High School. Subsequent posts took him to the University of Hawaii; Oberlin College, for one semester, 1927-28; Pasadena Junior College, and Oregon State College, where he taught from 1950 until his death. Active in scientific research, he conducted research for Stanford University, the Carnegie Foundation, the Smithsonian Institution, the Arctic Research Laboratory at Point Barrow, Alaska, the Bureau of Fisheries, and other international research institutions. He had just received a Fulbright grant for research in Australia, a study of sponges on the Great Barrier Reef, and was planning to leave for Australia this summer. During World War II he was Regional War-Gas consultant and conducted war-effort research in spectrophotometry and pH control.

His publications include a book, Life Science, published in 1941 with two subsequent editions, several monographs on American sponges, and fifteen or twenty shorter articles.

Survivors include his wife; four sons, Peter Max, of Corvallis, Leroy Arthur, '51, of Pendleton, David John, of Athens, Georgia, Allan Neal, of Seattle; one daughter, Mrs. Robert Bye, of Corvallis; and five grandsons.

HUFFORD — Clarence Elton Hufford, M.D., former head of the Radiological Society of North America, died of a heart attack March 25, 1958. He was 65.

Born February 19, 1893, in Perrysburg, Ohio, Dr. Hufford received his A.B. degree from Oberlin in 1916 and his M.D. degree from Western Reserve Medical School in 1920.

From 1921 to 1930 he was a physician in general practice and orthopedics in Toledo, Ohio. From 1930 until his death he was actively engaged in radiology and roentgenology.

Over the years Dr. Hufford was an outstanding figure for his important contributions in the control and early detection of cancer. The author of innumerable books and articles on the field of his specialization, he was honored in 1956 by the American Cancer Society by the presentation of a medal and certificate "in recognition of his important contribution in the control of cancer."

From 1955 until this year he was chairman of the joint commission of the American College of Radiology and Committee of Hospital Standards. He helped to form the Ohio division of the American Cancer Society, and served as chairman of the Cancer Committee of the Ohio State Medical Association. Among the many other professional organizations of which he was a member and which he served are the following: the Board of Trustees of the Ohio Unit of the American Cancer Society; the Board of Chancellors of the American College of Radiology; the Board of Directors and past president of the Toledo Tuberculosis Society; past president of Detroit Roentgen Ray; past president of the Toledo, Lucas County, Academy of Medicine; Board of Directors Child and Family Agency. He was also a member of the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church of Maumee, Ohio.

During World War II he received a special appointment to the United States Public Health Service.

Survivors include his wife, the former Crystal M. Carrl, '16, whom he married on December 26, 1918; one daughter, Virginia M., '42, and her husband, Dr. R. L. Willard, '42.

EMERY — Rufus Harding Emery, an official in Buxton, Ltd., died unexpectedly February 27, 1958 in Buenos Aires, Argentina, following a throat operation. He was 56 years old.

Born October 21, 1901, in Wilkensburg, Pennsylvania, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Franklin Emery (Alice Ida Jones, '91), he graduated from Oberlin College in 1923. As an undergraduate he was president of the class his freshman year, and president of the YMCA his junior year. He received his M.B.A. from Harvard School of Business Administration in 1925.

Starting out his career as a salesman for the Firestone Rubber Company, he went into foreign service for the White Motor Company in Argentina later becoming owner and manager of a motor transport company, Epresso Centenaria de Transportes, in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Mr. Emery later liquidated his business and joined Buxton, Ltd., as one of the top officials.

He married Emma Louise Hyde, '23, on June 27, 1925, and they had one son, William Rufus, born September 9, 1929, who graduated from Oberlin College in 1952.

Mr. Emery kept up his interest in Oberlin College, returning for frequent visits. He attended the 1956 Commencement, and was making plans to return in June for the 35th reunion of his class.

Survivors include his wife; his son William Rufus, of Mexico City; and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Allen, k, '18, of Oberlin.

CHERRY — James Eugene Cherry, who received his Ed.Mus.M. degree from the Conservatory in February, 1958, died in a motor accident on March 28 in Warren, Ohio. He was enroute to his home in Albion, Pennsylvania, from Akron, Ohio, where he had been teaching music in Roosevelt Elementary School. He was 29.

Mr. Cherry was born July 19, 1928, in Albion, and graduated from the Conservatory of Music with a Mus.B. degree in 1950. He entered the service in November, 1950, and was instrumental in organizing a soldiers' glee club with the 43 infantry division at Camp Pickett, Virginia. Returning to Oberlin, he received his Ed.Mus.B. in 1957.

At Oberlin he was a member of the musical union, the church choir, and the YMCA.
